Description

A good quality Victorian mahogany side table dating from the late 19th century. It is a particularly small size making it suitable for a variety of uses. It stands on turned tapering legs and has a single drawer with turned knobs. It also has a raised shaped gallery around the top surface. It is in good condition and is strong and sturdy. There are signs of age and use, some small marks and old stains on the top surface and minor knocks but no major damages and it has a lovely patina. There are a couple of old repairs and one knob has been changed but overall it displays well. The drawer opens well and is tidy inside. The table has been cleaned and gently polished and is ready for use. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
