Description

Antique Victorian Apothecary Chemist Pill Roller Board in Wood and Brass. This is an antique Victorian apothecary's roller made of wood and brass. It is a large and original piece from the late 19th/early 20th It is suitable for collectors of scientific and medical artefacts, as well as those interested in antique apothecary and chemist items. The roller and baseboard are made of wood with brass mounts and fittings and, unusually, still have its sliding small tray, often lost. In good antique condition, expected signs of age and wear; no signs of any repairs; wood has scratches and dings; brass is unpolished and showing age-related tarnish. Please refer to the detailed photos provided, as they form part of the item's description. The baseboard is approximately 33.5cm x 13.8cm; the roller is 33cm x 6.7 cm.
