Description

An Elegant William IV Birdseye Maple and Carver Giltwood Library / Centre or Sofa Table English Circa 1830 This distinctive library or centre table of birdseye maple and carved giltwood portrays an impressive appearance. The superior construction and elegant design along with choice of materials used all point to Holland And Sons or Gillows being the likely makers of this fine table. The design is very much in the style of the pieces produced by the partnership of Morel and Seddon for George IV during his refurbishment of the royal residences in the 1820s. Veneered throughout in birdseye maple of the very finest quality and figure, the rectangular top above a frieze, with concealed twin drawers, and carved and gilded moulded apron flanked by giltwood carved brackets to each end. The table stands on two fluted end supports with baluster form columns surrounded by exaggerated foliate carved gilt lappets to the base sitting on birdseye maple platforms raised by giltwood claw feet with concealed castors. These tables are often referred to as centre or library tables and less frequently sofa tables, the latter terminology may have been used when it was manufactured though...
