Description

A fine George III folding card table in satinwood, the hinged rectangular top with rounded corners and with rosewood crossbanding strung with boxwood, and rosewood edges, opening to a square green baize playing surface edged in satinwood, over a frieze with conforming rounded corners and with boxwood stringing around a plain central panel, with a double gateleg to the rear and raised on four square tapering and strung supports with brass castors. English, circa 1790. Condition: Overall very good, the table is in very good condition and is solid and robust, it stands well and the gatelegs operate correctly, the castors are all the originals, there are a few marks in various places consistent with age, but overall the table is in excellent condition and has a really lovely colour and wonderful patina associated with furniture of the period.
