Description

Here is a fine painting of Edward H Derring of Baddesley Clinton, a national trust property near Solihull. This portrait shows Edward Dering holding a copy of the writings of St Thomas Aquinas, as he was studying Catholic philosophy. Baddesley Clinton, with the new wing, can be seen in the background. He is wearing the old-fashioned dress, which he favoured. Inscribed 'Edward .H. Dering' (upper left); signed, inscribed and dated 'THE PHILOSOPHERS MORNING WALK/BADDESLEY CLINTON/R.DERING.PINXIT./1894' (lower left). Oil on canvas, housed on a gilt frame, the size is 117.5 x 81.5cm (46 1/4 x 32 1/16in) whilst overall the framed size is 130 x 94cm. The present work is a version of 'The Philosopher's Morning Walk' currently in the Baddesley Clinton Collection, Warwickshire. See photo for painting in situ. Dering was an artist in oils and watercolours with many of his works at Baddesley. Both painting and frame are in good condition, the painting having had some restoration especially to the clouds upper left. The frame has one or two minor losses which have been re-gilded. There is an interesting story behind the artist and sitter, which as an ex-guide of Baddesley, I have spent many...
