Description

This exquisite double gate leg Sutherland table, hailing from the remarkable Victorian era, is in outstanding antique condition. Its splendid top, adorned with a moulded edge, boasts stunning burr walnut veneers. Although the top exhibits slight discolouration when unfolded, this minor issue can be easily concealed with a table runner and remains unnoticed when closed. The table stands on beautifully carved walnut uprights, ending in elegant cabriole feet with white castors, all connected by a finely turned stretcher. Each leaf is supported by a turned gateleg, allowing for independent or combined use. Crafted with solid construction, the table features a beautiful rich hue and exceptional graining, making it perfect for occasional use and space-saving when not in use due to its compact folded profile. Despite the typical imperfections of antique furniture, it remains robust, with a lustrous colour and patina, making it an ideal choice for small spaces and promising many more years of functionality.
