

SA1111293

Circle of Pierre-Joseph Redouté
1759 –1840
A White Spider Lily and Butterfly
oil on canvas
87 x 53 cm.
Price

GBP 900

| USD $1,218 | EUR 1,053

Item Reference: SA1111293Date of manufacture: 18th Century

Dimensions

Height = 87 cm (34.3")

Width = 53 cm (20.9")

Depth = 1 cm (0.4")

Description

Circle of Pierre-Joseph Redouté 1759 –1840 A White Spider Lily and Butterfly oil on canvas 87 x 53 cm. Sometimes also called sea daffodil, or Peruvian daffodil, the white spider lily is unique and quite elegant. This plant reveals a very beautiful blooming during the entire summer season. It requires heat to grow in full earth: that's why growing it in warmer oceanic climates is common. It's known that flowers have meanings, which vary in different cultures. You can express your emotions and thoughts through them. This means you should be cautious when you present someone with a bouquet. However, this doesn't mean everyone knows the language of flowers. Back in the Victorian Era, flowers were used as a means of communications. People used them as codes for what they wanted to say. But don't think that they were the only ones. The Chinese and Japanese incorporated flowers in their art in culture long before the British. There's even a Japanese equivalent of the language of flowers – hanakotoba. The fragile beauties are dominant in their art, clothes, even in legal documents and the national symbol. Even the art of Ikebana is an expression of sentiments and emotions through...

Seller Details

Artware Fineart

18 La Gare 51 Surrey Row London SE1 0BZ United Kingdom

Tel: 07958 699 645

International Tel: +44 7958 699 645

