Description

We are exceptionally delighted to offer this spectacular Victorian diamond star tiara made c.1890. The tiara will come in a fully fitted presentation case as photographed. Upon pondering what could be the definitive image and symbol of crown jewels, iconic and epitomising fine jewellery, one may be hard-pressed to come up with something more iconic than a tiara. It is perhaps exactly this portrayal and image which makes one so alluring and enchanting - whether be it from the imagery of a princess or as a symbol of prosperity, nobility and elegance, there is something undeniably extraordinary about tiaras that could be seen as a 'grail' piece for many. This particular tiara features an almost picture-perfect design that one may imagine upon hearing the term 'tiara' with a stunning central diamond star and a complimenting diamond set bow-shaped section underneath which raises the star by just the right amount upon wearing. The central star is adorned with various sizes of old European cut diamonds, tapering in size and meticulously set within the finest and unobstructive gold/silver mounts. Furthermore, this section can be unscrewed from the tiara frame to be worn as a b...
