Description

A magnificent quality antique Regency mahogany and satinwood banded drop leaf pembroke breakfast table dating from circa 1820. The top is in a beautifully figured, mellow mahogany with ebony and satinwood banding to the edges. Featuring a pair of drop leaves which sit on a turned column and four out-swept legs which culminate in brass castors. It has a generous oak-lined drawer to one end and a dummy drawer the other, each with turned ebonised knob handles. A very good quality piece, ideal as an occasional dining/breakfast table, for one or two people, with the convenience of folding away when not in use. Construction/Wood: Mahogany, satinwood Condition Report: Good colour and patina. General wear and marks commensurate with age. A few old worm holes to the underneath. Small piece of veneer missing to edge Dimensions: Height: 70cm Max Width Open: 111cm Width Closed: 56cm Max Depth: 91cm Height to underneath: 68cm
