Description

This exquisite George II walnut bureau, dating back to circa 1740, represents the epitome of fine craftsmanship from the period. The bureau features a beautifully made fall front, elegantly cross banded and adorned with stunning chequer-stung patterns. Intricate sunburst inlays crafted from boxwood and ebony add a touch of sophistication and artistry to the piece. Upon opening, one discovers a meticulously fitted interior that resonates with both function and style. Additionally, the bureau is complemented by four long, graduating drawers, each also cross and chequer-banded, that provide ample storage while contributing to the overall aesthetic appeal. The piece rests gracefully on bracket feet, ensuring its stability and enhancing its timeless charm, making it a standout addition to any collection of antique furniture.
