Description

This antique lustre footed bowl, in the 'York Cup' shape, was designed by Daisy Makeig-Jones for Wedgwood. The bowl exemplifies her distinctive Lustre style, which rose to prominence in the early 20th century. The piece is adorned with vibrant, iridescent colors and intricate patterns. The interior features a deep blue surface speckled with a starry effect, while the exterior displays a rich orange hue with crimson mottling and gold accents, including a gilded butterfly motif. A gilded rim and base enhance the luxurious quality of the design. The base bears the Wedgwood Portland Vase mark, confirming its authenticity. Susannah Margareta "Daisy" Makeig-Jones (1881-1945) joined Wedgwood in 1909 and became a full designer with her own studio in 1914. She pioneered innovative pottery production technologies, resulting in the creation of the iconic Fairyland and Ordinary Lustre series. This bowl corresponds to pattern Z4825, part of the initial Ordinary Lustre range introduced in 1914. This specific design, decorated with highly ornamented gilded butterflies, was produced from 1914 to 1929 and is now highly collectible. Limited production and the growing appreciation for Make...
