Description

Antique 1782 sterling silver fish slice by Thomas Daniell & John Wall – London. This exceptionally beautiful and finely crafted sterling silver fish slice, made in London in 1782 by the renowned partnership of Thomas Daniell & John Wall, features exquisite pierced openwork with profuse foliate scrollwork. The blade is further adorned with delicate engraved decorations, including wriggle work borders and laurel leaves, showcasing the masterful craftsmanship of late 18th-century English silver. Perfectly sized for use as a cake or pastry server, this elegant piece is both functional and highly collectible. Maker's attribution: Fully hallmarked, with a partially worn maker's mark showing the letters "IW" with the upper part of the letter "D". The underside is inscribed: "T. Daniell, ?20 Foster Lane, Maker." In 1781–1782, Thomas Daniell and John Wall worked as silversmiths and jewellers at 20 Foster Lane, opposite Goldsmiths' Hall, with their joint sponsor's mark present on this piece. Historical significance: Thomas Daniell (active 1771–c. 1800), son of renowned silversmith Jabez Daniell, produced works that are now housed in prestigious collections, including the British...
