Description

This rare and elegant Royal Worcester vase, created in 1904, features a unique design with a base crafted in the shape of an eagle's claw. The vase is hand-painted with the exceptional level of skill that distinguishes Royal Worcester's creations. Considering that the vase has remained in nearly pristine condition, with the past 120 years having virtually no impact on its appearance, this exceptional condition ensures the vase will serve as a distinguished decorative element in any interior or as a refined and sophisticated gift. Founded in 1751 in Worcester, England, the Royal Worcester porcelain factory is one of the oldest and most prestigious porcelain manufacturers in the world. Renowned for its exceptional craftsmanship and innovative techniques, the factory has earned a reputation for producing high-quality, finely decorated porcelain. In the 19th and early 20th centuries, Royal Worcester became synonymous with luxury and elegance, supplying decorative and functional wares to royalty and collectors alike. The factory's ability to combine artistic design with technical precision has solidified its place as a leader in the world of fine ceramics. Dimensions: Height: ...
