Description

A lovely and serene landscape, in which two figures are contemplating the river from the riverbank and the bridge. Dating from circa 1890-1900, the painting is unsigned, but is certainly a work by the French artist Alphonse Marx, from whose studio it was acquired. While Marx is highly reputed and he exhibited at the Paris Salon, very little is known about his life. This is probably because he used Marx as a pseudonym, his family name having been Isaac. Measuring 33 x 46 cm, our oil on canvas is presented in a period frame. The overall framed size is 42 x 56 cm.
