Description

George III mahogany breakfront bookcase We are delighted to offer you this mahogany George III breakfront bookcase. A Georgian mahogany breakfront bookcase is an elegant and timeless piece of furniture typical of the Georgian period (1714-1830), combining functionality with classic design elements. The bookcase is characterized by its distinctive breakfront design, where the central section projects outward, creating a prominent focal point. This design is symmetrical but has a depth in the middle, adding to the visual interest and balance. The top section consists of 4 glazed doors divided by tracery, glass allows for the display of books and decorative items while keeping dust at bay. Inside, the shelves are adjustable, spanning the width of the case, providing flexibility for various books or objects of different sizes. The shelves are made from wood. The breakfront bookcase offers ample storage, making it ideal for books, fine china, or other collections. The glass-fronted sections allow for the display of valuable or decorative items while the solid doors or lower sections are suited for less display-oriented storage. While designed as a bookcase, its classic and impo...
