Description

Chippendale revival mahogany desk This superb Chippendale revival mahogany desk was made in one of the finest workshops of the period circa 1900. Probably Gillows or Edwards and Roberts, who both were renowned cabinetmakers of the period, who made furniture to this incredible high standard. Only a handful of cabinetmakers could construct and make an item to this standard. The desk is a serpentine shape to the front sides and rear, as well as having a concave central drawer. There are 2 drawers to each side of the knee-hole and the concave central drawer between them, all the drawers are fitted the original gilt brass handles. The edge of the desk is carved with fine carving that borders the original inset leather work surface. At each corner there are the stunning carved cabriole legs, in the high-Chippendale style. The cabinetmakers used the best craftsmen and highest-grade timber available. Imagine the pleasure you will get owning this spectacular desk and the conversations of admiration from your family and friends, as you purr over it. When this desk was originally made it would have been to someone of major wealth, as it would have come with a hefty price ticket. The ...
