Description

Ralph Todd 1856-1932. Like many of his fellow Newlyn artists, Ralph Todd spent time painting in the art colonies in Brittany. It was here that Todd crossed paths with the Newlyn colony founder, Stanhope Forbes, with whom he would later become great friends. In 1883, Todd moved to Newlyn and strived to make a living from his art, producing some charming and memorable works although founding little commercial success. He primarily worked in watercolours but was also very competent in oils. This is a charming example of the artist's work. 'The Fisherman's Daughter, Newlyn' signed watercolour, image size 37x27 cms, framed size 56x45 cms
