Description

Antique c. 1800–1805 Minton porcelain set – "Crazy Cow" pattern 106. This rare and exquisite Minton set features the highly sought-after pattern number 106, famously known as the "Crazy Cow" pattern and occasionally referred to as the "Bengal Tiger." Dating to c. 1800–1805, the set includes a dessert plate, a saucer, and a coffee cup. The vibrant design showcases bright iron red, deep green, and royal blue enamels in an intricate foliate pattern, with a stylised cow (or tiger) at the centre of the saucer and plate. The "Crazy Cow" pattern is exceptionally rare, with coffee cups and saucers in this design almost never appearing on the market. Each item in the set is marked with pattern number 106 on the bottom, confirming its authenticity. Historical background: Minton, one of the pioneers of English china production, was established in Staffordshire and gained fame for its fine white bone china and vibrant colours, including the iconic "Minton Blue." The "Crazy Cow" pattern, thought to be an imperfect replication of a Chinese dragon design, resulted in a unique and whimsical creature that has become a collector's favourite.
