Description

This is a fine quality antique English Victorian landscape oil painting of an angling scene by Paul H. Ellis, on canvass, circa 1890, in a fine quality gilt frame, in excellent condition. The painting depicts an elderly gentleman restfully contemplating life, sitting on a chair on his boat. He rests his rod, with his line in the water and a red float bobbing, whilst his intense Jack Russell dog waits to pounce at the first sign of a bite. So typical of this breed of dog. The artist skilfully shows the reflected trees and farmstead on the other side of the bank. It's a hazy day probably around midday with little sign of sun, excellent for fishing. Behind the boat we see coppice tree stumps and reeds in the foreground. This is a well-balanced painting that displays a peaceful and nostalgic scene of a bygone era and it's a study one would not tire of viewing. The Victorian oil picture is framed in a fine quality ornate gilt frame, which is excellent condition. The frame is inscribed "The Angler's Assistant - Paul H Ellis" and the painting is also signed "Paul H Ellis" in the bottom left-hand corner. The angling scene would look superb in a variety of rooms, including th...
