Description

This superb deep relief carved hardwood Raj period Indian wall panel has its original hardwood carved frame. It is an interesting and special piece. Deeply hand carved from a single piece of rich dense timber approximately 9cm thick. It shows an interesting scene of an oxen train transporting people and commodities. At the bottom, there is a harnessed cart being pulled by a pair of oxen with three people riding on board the two wheeled cart along a mountainous track and above there are two single lead oxen both carrying provisions and one with a seated passenger. The three dimensional view created by the artist carver is most impressive. The framed panel is in very good condition, has a rich patination and age-related colour, and would be a very eye catching edition to any wall. Indian, circa 1880 Height 73cm x width 45cm x depth 10cm
