Description

William Traies 1789-1872 A Drover Crossing The First Bridge on the Dart, Dartmoor 1857 inscribed on the stretcher "William Traies 1857 The First Bridge on the Dart Devon" oil on canvas 33 x 45 cm. Notes It is difficult to be precise in locating this view on Dartmoor. It could be one of many locations but two locations where Clapper Bridges can be found on Dartmoor are possibilities. Dartmeet is a popular tourist spot in the centre of Dartmoor, Devon, England at grid reference SX672731. It lies at the end of the B3357 road, about 4.5 miles (7.2 km) east of Two Bridges. From here, the road continues eastwards as a minor road with restrictions on the size of vehicles, past Poundsgate and over Holne Bridge and New Bridge to Ashburton on the edge of the moor. Immediately east of the river crossing, this road ascends Dartmeet Hill, a long steep hill that climbs 130 metres (430 ft) up the valley side. As the name suggests, Dartmeet is the meeting point of the two major tributaries of the River Dart: the East Dart and West Dart. The road bridge, built in 1792, spans the East Dart; just above it, at the side of the large car park is an earlier, possibly medieval, clapper bridge...
