Description

This Tudor Oyster dates back to 1966 according to the serial number. It features a 31mm stainless steel screwback case with a fixed polished bezel, white/cream dial, Arabic numerals showing signs of fading off, striking red seconds hand all underneath a plexiglass. The crown features the Rolex logo which was common for most Tudor watches produced around that time. Operates from a manual wind movement with a power reserve of around 40 hours. The watch is not deemed water-resistant due to its age and is fitted to an unsigned stainless steel stretch strap. The Tudor brand of wristwatches was established by Rolex founder Hans Wilsdorf in 1926. The Tudor Oyster line was introduced in the mid-20th century, offering timepieces that combined Rolex's renowned Oyster case technology with Tudor's own movements.
