Description

This elegant 1920s countertop display cabinet is a fine example of early Art Deco-era design, perfect for showcasing collectibles, jewellery, or small valuable items. Crafted from rich mahogany wood, it features glass-veneered front, sides, and top, allowing for an unobstructed view of the displayed pieces. The interior includes two adjustable glass shelves and a mirror back offering storage and display options. The angled base design was a popular feature in high-end retail displays of the 1920s, enhancing visibility for jewellery, watches, and other luxury goods. The original red velvet lining on the lower portion hints at its past use, likely in a jewelry store, or fine goods retailer. The back features a solid wooden panel with a hinged door, providing secure access for arranging items inside.
