Description

A fine oil on canvas by the highly regarded landscape painter Joseph Vincent Nicholas Francis Weiss 1859-1919. The painting is superbly worked in thick oils and wonderfully captures a bright sunny day casting shadows in a Sussex Village. The work is signed to the lower right Jose Weiss. Weiss was born in Paris in 1859, the son of John Frederick Francis Weiss a German from Alsace and Sylvie Marie Josephine Talbot who had an English background. He grew up in France developing a passion for painting but he only became an artist after a painting holiday in West Sussex. He decided to stay in England and make a living from painting and soon took up residence at Houghton House in the village of Houghton, Arundel, Sussex. In August 1899 he became a naturalized British subject and remained living and painting in Houghton for the rest of his life. He was a prolific and great painter of English landscapes in the style of the Barbizon School, learnt from his early life in France, mostly depicting scenes of the Sussex countryside. He exhibited at the Royal Academy, Royal Society of British Artists and at the Paris Salon where he received an honourable mention, and sold his paintings...
