Description

A pair of Dutch Delft plates dating from the late 18th Century. The centre of each plate is decorated with a blue and white chinoiserie scene with foliage around the rim. The edges are painted with traditional ochre colored slip. The rear has a foot rim and 'hatchet' makers mark for De Porcelayne Bijl (The Porcelain Axe) (Delft, South Holland, The Netherlands, 1657-1803) They are in good condition for their age and display well. There are no major chips or cracks, just some knocks and small losses around the edges (see photos). Approximate Measurements : Diameter : 9" / 23cm Height : 1" / 2.5cm The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
