Description

A Mid 19th Century English Mahogany Turned Spindle Armchair of Excellent Quality. c.1845-60. This is a great example of the art of the wood turner, the arms and back splat being formed of a series of turned spindles which have been beautifully executed. The legs have also been finely turned and have leaf decoration. Originally designed as a library armchair or for a gentleman's study, this fine chair has been fully restored by us and upholstered to an under finish, ready for the client's choice of outer fabric. This is a chair with very strong lines and it is also strong in the practical sense.
