Description

This elegant 30-hour oak longcase clock, from Sudeley Castle, crafted by the renowned Richard Prew of Tewksbury, stands as a testament to timeless elegance and traditional craftsmanship. The clock boasts a solid oak construction that exudes a sense of sturdiness while maintaining a simple yet graceful design. The clock features a domed hood that gracefully crowns the piece, flanked by brass capped side pillars that add a touch of sophistication. Below, the square solid oak trunk door opens to reveal the inner workings of the clock, leading the eye down to the well-crafted raised panelled base section. This base is further enhanced by a shaped plinth, grounding the clock in its surroundings with a firm stance. The face of the clock is adorned with a 12-inch arch dial, meticulously painted with delicate sprays of flowers and strawberries, bringing a burst of nature's beauty indoors. The dial also features a practical date aperture, seamlessly integrating functionality with artistry. Attention to detail is evident as both the dial and movement have been cleaned and restored, ensuring that the clock not only looks magnificent but operates with precision. The clock's disti...
