Description

A Regency Scroll Arm Mahogany Chair with Leather Seat and Sabre Legs, C1820 A very fine quality English early 19th century open armchair, library or desk chair, of good workshop construction with newly upholstered brown drop-in leather seat. A handsome Regency antique chair with an exuberant scroll arm, slightly lowered by 3-4cm, the seat measures 42cm from the ground making it a versatile occasional or desk chair, study or hallway etc..., presented with an elegant soft brown leather seat, front and back sabre reeded legs and handsomely carved backrest. A well proportioned and superbly stylish antique chair, attractive from all sides and a very useable antique, function and form that can compliment a classic or contemporary space. Dimensions Height 74cm Width 50cm Depth 57cm Presented in mostly excellent and very stable condition, no wobbles or obvious signs of significant historic repairs, other than a bespoke iron bracket to the inside of 1 arm, a 19th century repair which we chose to leave as part of its history., recently back from our workshop to have minimal conservation, discreetly and correctly done and otherwise structurally excellent with a gently worn i...
