Description

Edwardian inlaid satinwood writing desk This Edwardian inlaid satinwood writing desk was made circa 1900. Satinwood was a timber that was used for the exclusive furniture in the Edwardian period. The satinwood would be placed in the fine country and London homes of the very wealthy and so is made to a very high quality. This lovely example of an Edwardian inlaid satinwood writing desk has fine inlay panels to the drawer fronts and stringing and banding on all sides. The desk has a gilt tooled leather inset writing surface with a pair of drawers to the back with a fine brass gallery on top. Under the top are a pair of mahogany lined drawers. It stands on tapered legs with line inlay with the original castors. Imagine the elegant home where this was first placed and the Edwardian lady or gentleman sitting at it as they wrote their letters to loved ones. The Edwardian period is known as the age of elegance, items as beautiful as this are the reason why. 107cms wide 42ins 61cms deep 24ins 97cms high 38ins All Measurements are as accurate as possible Delivery UK mainland FREE Other destinations please contact us, and we will get a quote.
