Description

Rare Bow Porcelain Figurine of an Boy Drummer, c. 1744 An elegant and finely crafted antique porcelain figurine of a young drummer, exquisitely painted in soft pastel hues of pink, grey, and blue. The delicate colouring enhances the intricate detailing of the musician's ornate robes, demonstrating the high level of craftsmanship in early English porcelain. This piece is marked with the gold anchor, a mark often associated with the prestigious Bow porcelain manufactory, which was a key rival to the Chelsea porcelain factory in the early development of both soft and hard paste porcelain in Britain. The base is also characteristic of Bow porcelain, further supporting the attribution. Dimensions Height: 28.5 cm Width: 14.5 cm Depth: 11.5 cm Weight: 1165 g Condition One drumstick is absent, and there are small losses to the bocage. However, the enamels and gilt are beautifully preserved, and the figurine remains in excellent antique condition. Shipping & Packaging Shipped fully tracked and insured. Shipping cost includes labour, packaging, and postage. Please examine all photographs carefully before purchasing and feel free to ask any questions.
