Description

A rare item of 19th Century flatware by the sought after George W Adams. This wonderful piece is a long handled condiment ladle, with feather edge decoration to the shank. It is in Old English shape and has a graceful curving handle. The round bowl is lightly gilded. To the top front of the shank is an engraved armorial. These charming small ladles were used at the table for serving condiments other than the more common salt and pepper and are desirable collector's items. Dimensions below.
