Description

A finely cast antique bronze figure of Buddha, dating to the 19th century. Seated in the Bhumisparsha Mudra, or "earth-touching gesture," this depiction represents the moment of enlightenment, with one hand resting on the knee while the other is delicately placed in the lap. The flowing robes drape naturally over the body, revealing intricate detailing that enhances the serene expression and meditative presence of the piece. The rich patina, with hints of verdigris, reflects its age and history, adding depth and character. A timeless sculpture, this Buddha figure embodies spiritual tranquillity and serves as both an object of contemplation and an elegant decorative piece.
