Description

A beautiful small 17th Century oak box stool made in around 1640. . The azed top with worn notched border and original hand forged iron twin hasp with rivetted lock plate. . The frieze on all four sides of the stool having deeply carved running pinwheels, notched corners and notched apron. Set on tubular ring turned legs united with original notched stretchers. . Some wear to the feet, an old depletion to front upper edge - so old that it has blended in and developed the same rich patination. Hinges are split pins and appear original also. . Really rich and superb colour and dark deep patina. Heavy and robust and usable. . Additional corner blocks added inside in each of the rear inner corners - added a very long time ago - and a small oak block added to rear face, probably to replace the original block which prevented the lid from falling backwards when open. . A fantastic and very rare little box stool of early form with notched detailing and bold carving in excellent original condition. . Dimensions are: . 12.75 inches wide, 12.75 inches deep and 15.75 inches high
