Description

This is an antique decorative jardiniere stand. An English, coopered oak planter, dating to the early 20th century, circa 1920. This exquisite Lister Wood Craft coopered oak jardiniere stand is a striking example of classic English craftsmanship, ideal for showcasing plants or decorative displays. Superb coopered oak body with a rich, warm tone, beautifully accentuated by contrasting brass coopering bands, enhancing its timeless appeal. Elegant brass circular drop handles, offering both decorative charm and practical ease of movement. Stands gracefully upon a long, slender tripod base, exuding refined proportions while ensuring stability. A useful under tier, perfect for additional storage or display, adding both form and function to the piece. This antique decorative jardiniere stand embodies traditional artistry while complementing both period and contemporary interiors. A truly versatile statement piece, ready to bring character and elegance to any setting. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
