Description

Technical Description A fine Edwardian Balloon Mantel Clock dating to c1910. Mahogany, in the George III style, it has a line of boxwood stringing around the clock face which has a hinged brass opening with pierced steel hands. Below is a panel of satin and boxwood inlay depicting crossed flaming torches held together in a bow of flowers. Sits level on four brass bun feet. Comments The clock seems to be in working order, keeping accurate time, striking its number on the hour and once on the half hour. The internal hammer can be bent slightly to start/stop the bell sticking the bell coil. It can be temperamental if moved as the clock surface has to be level and the feet can be adjusted to aid this. Date & Origin England, c1910 Condition Working condition, age related wear as shown, no obvious defects. If not 100% happy on arrival we offer free return postage and a full refund as normal. Dimensions Height: 30.5 cm Length: 19 cm Width: 13cm
