Description

A high quality and very decorative heavy cast bronze mid 19th century Raj period Indian vase of an elegant and interesting form with a broad flared and domed foot which rises to a slender stem with a bulbous body above which graduates with shaped mouldings to a tall narrow neck which flares into a wide rim. Cast in several sections and joined together to form this fine heavy bronze vase which is superbly decorated with some of the best deeply hand carved and chased decoration I have ever seen some of which is almost three dimensional. The foot, neck, and flared rim are each decorated with a different foliate design and the bulbous body has a continuous panelled display of exotic birds and flowers. The vase has a well patinated green finish with a well polished lustre. Indian, circa 1860 Height 40cm x width 19cm x depth 19cm
