Description

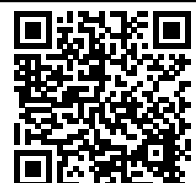

This charming little dining sofreh was made by the Timuri - Sangtschuli tribe around the second half of the nineteenth century in the borderlands of north-eastern Persia and north-western Afghanistan. Archaic in design, the natural, plain-weave camel-hair ground contains eight stylised trees and hidden amongst them is, what looks like, a small stylised 'dog'! The main border contains stylised four-petalled flowers and the skirts are complete in brocade. Generally, this sofreh is in pretty good condition albeit with some minor wear in the camel-hair field as can be seen in the close-up photos and reflected in the very reasonable price tag. Size: 1.35m x 0.65m (4' 5" x 2' 2").
