Description

This sterling silver goblet, made by James Deakin & Sons in Sheffield in 1921, is a beautifully preserved example of early 20th-century silverware. Known for their fine craftsmanship, James Deakin & Sons have created a piece that combines elegance and functionality. This goblet is hallmarked for London, attesting to its authenticity and providing historical context for its origin. Often used as a presentation cup, this piece is remarkable for its immaculate condition, having remained untouched, which is rare for objects of this nature. Measuring 20.5 cm in height and 10 cm in diameter, the goblet is of an imposing size, making it an impressive piece suitable for display or use. Weighing 455 grams, it is crafted from a substantial thickness of silver, highlighting its quality and durability. The goblet's simple yet elegant design allows it to blend seamlessly into a variety of settings, whether used as a functional piece for special occasions or as a decorative piece in a collection. Its excellent condition enhances its appeal, making it a valuable addition for collectors of antique silver or those who appreciate fine craftsmanship. The timeless design and historical s...
