Description

This magnificent George IV sterling silver chalice, created by the renowned silversmith William Eaton in 1826, is a fine example of the opulent design and superior craftsmanship characteristic of Georgian silver. Hallmarked in London, this piece is not only a functional object but also a work of art, reflecting the elegance and detailed craftsmanship of the period. The chalice features an ornate decoration, with vine leaves and bunches of grapes adorning the base. This intricate motif not only enhances its aesthetic appeal but also symbolizes abundance and celebration, making it particularly suitable for ceremonial settings. Measuring 16.5 cm in height and 11 cm in diameter, the chalice is of imposing size, making it a striking centerpiece for any collection or display. Weighing 370 grams, it is crafted from a substantial thickness of silver, ensuring its durability and quality. The interior of the chalice is gilded, adding a touch of luxury and providing a protective layer that enhances the piece's durability. This gilding also provides a beautiful contrast with the sterling silver exterior, highlighting the craftsmanship and design details. In excellent overall cond...
