Description

An elegant 19th-century mahogany tripod table featuring a classic circular top and a beautifully turned central pillar. Its versatile scale and rich, warm wood tones make it a wonderful choice for use as a wine table alongside an armchair, an occasional piece in a study, or a lamp stand in a quiet corner. The table is defined by its traditional three-legged tripod base, which exemplifies the understated symmetry and functional design of 19th-century cabinet making. Crafted from quality mahogany, the surface displays a lovely grain pattern that catches the light beautifully when polished. The piece is in good condition overall. It has been carefully cleaned and wax-polished, and features some historic repairs to two of the feet as shown in the photographs, which do not detract from its charm or daily use.
