Description

This very finely cast heavy metal box was most likely originally used for storing cigars and the interior has a wooden lining. The box is in the form of a very ornate 13th century wooden coffer which is strongly bound with decorative metal strapwork and multiple hinges. It has a carrying handle at each end. The front has a detailed carved panel with gathered knights on horseback being addressed by priests presumably before the battle. On the inside of the lid, there is a cast inscription and a date of 1219. This most interesting box has an indistinct maker's name with Copenhagen, Denmark below. The metal has a patinated bronze finish. The box is in good original condition. Height 9cm x width 21cm x depth 10cm
