Description

This industrial stool dates from the 1930s and would have originally been used in a British workshop or factory setting. It features 4 pressed steel legs, each joined to a circular seat with domed rivets, a great example of an early practical, minimalist industrial design. The stool retains its original painted finish, now beautifully worn with age and use, giving it an appealing industrial patina. Its simple, four legged form offers excellent stability while remaining lightweight and easy to move. Today, it makes a striking piece in any interior, ideal as a plant stand, side table, or functional display item in vintage and industrial-inspired spaces.
