Description

This interesting group of early Greek antiquities consists of three pottery vessels, each one most interesting considering their great age. Circa 4th century BC. A jug with incised decoration, a twin handled flask with traces of a painted design and a twin handled vase with signs of painted decoration. The vase has slight chipping to the rim, but all three are in remarkable condition with no restoration or repair, and each one has a good original untouched finish in keeping with their age. The largest piece is the vase, which measures 11cm high x 9cm wide x 9cm deep.
