Description

A solid walnut library armchair, circa 1870. The chair features a high, gently scrolled backrest and generously proportioned seat, both upholstered in traditional hessian, ready for final upholstery in a fabric of your choosing. The frame boasts elegantly turned walnut spindle supports along the sides of the arms, extending from the padded armrests down to the seat rail, forming a balustrade-style structure. The arm terminals are beautifully carved with tightly scrolled volutes. Below, the chair stands on bold turned front legs with carved details and brass casters, the rear legs are gently splayed and echo the refined curvature of the overall form. This armchair would have originally graced a gentleman's library or study, combining both comfort and stature. W 72cm (28.25") D 89cm (35") H 94cm (37") Seat H 40cm (15.75")
