Description

18th Century Corner Cabinet on Later Stand A charming 18th century oak corner cabinet featuring a panelled front and three fixed, shaped internal shelves—ideal for display or storage. This piece sits on a later, sympathetically matched stand, making it a marriage of two elements that complement each other beautifully. The oak has developed a rich, warm patina over centuries of use, adding to its character and appeal. There is a small puncture to the wood at the back, but this is minor and does not detract from the cabinet's overall presentation. Evidence of historic woodworm is visible; however, it is inactive and has been professionally treated. The later base features plain legs and a shaped under tier, providing both stability and additional storage or display space. Versatile and full of period charm, this cabinet would suit a variety of rooms and interior styles.
