Description

This bold and stylish original poster from 1939 in the French Art Deco style truly captures the essence of the iconic Marx Brothers. The very large framed poster for the Metro Goldwyn Mayer film 'Un Jour Au Cirque' which was released in 1939, is a real collector's item. The artwork features Harpo, Chico, and Groucho overlooked by a very smug looking giraffe with a smoking "human cannon ball" canon to the right and a swinging trapeze artist to the top left corner. The poster, a genuine piece of film memorabilia, is perfect for aficionados of cinema history or collectors of original movie posters however its scale means it is such a showpiece that it is a fantastic decorative wall feature for any home. Featuring the distinctive style of the era, the poster has bright colours and bold imagery that would bring a touch of nostalgia to any room. Whether it's destined for a private collection or set to adorn the walls of a movie lover's den or home cinema room, this piece is a testament to the enduring legacy of the Marx Brothers and their timeless appeal. This fabulous poster measures 153 cms by 112 cms. Condition: In generally in very good order for its age. It has been ...
