Description

Pair 18th-Century Dutch Delft Polychrome Vases 3 BELLS Drie klokken Factory Brief Description: This is a beautiful pair of tall, original 18th-century Dutch Delft polychrome Vases from the Drie Klokken Factory (3-Bells Factory) Each impressive vase is of hexagonal form, with incredible-quality hand-painted scenes, including landscapes, flowers, seascapes, and a courting Dutch couple strolling along while conversing. Both are marked with the Three Bells factory sign at the base. Biography of the Drie Klokken Factory: De Drie Klokken pottery was established in 1671 at premises on De Geer that had previously housed a brewery. The company was founded by Barbara Cornelisdochter Rotteveel. Her grandson, Pieter Mesch, took over in 1706. The next owners were his widow, Maria van Ophoven, and her second husband, Hendrik van Willigen. De Drie Klokken was sold to Adriaan van der Does in 1743. His widow and son ran the company after his death. The pottery was auctioned off in 1784, after which it was run by a partnership (compagnieschap). The owners expanded the company, constructing several new buildings, and in 1840, operations moved to the Porceleynse Clauw pottery. In 1841...
