Description

This stunning 19th-century mahogany linen press is a remarkable piece of craftsmanship, featuring a beautifully moulded cornice and intricately designed panel doors that reveal a thoughtfully arranged interior. On the left, a convenient hanging rail offers ample space for garments, while the right side boasts three small sliding trays for easy access to smaller items. The linen press sits on a projecting base and includes two short drawers above a long graduated drawer, all adorned with delicate cock beading and complemented by rich oak linings and elegant brass handles. Finished with bracket feet, this piece not only showcases the artistry of its time but also remains in excellent condition, free from odors or woodworm damage. Its exceptional patina enhances the natural beauty of the mahogany, making this linen press a captivating addition to any home, infusing warmth and sophistication into your decor.
