Date of manufacture: Edwardian

Description

At its heart sits a beautifully cut old European diamond, collet set in platinum and weighing approximately 0.50 carats (colour H/I, clarity SI1/2). This central gem is gracefully encircled by ten natural half pearls, each around 2.8mm in size, arranged in a delicate openwork star motif. The pearls are individually collet set with fine millegrain detailing in gold, lending the piece a subtle texture and refined finish that is characteristic of the Edwardian period. The ring's head measures approximately 14mm across, making a striking impression on the hand without being overstated. Marked 18ct gold and platinum, this charming piece is a fine example of early 20th-century craftsmanship.
