Description

Outstanding Edwardian Inlaid Ladies Writing Desk. An incredibly rare and wonderfully ornate piece. We are delighted to bring to you this truly fantastic and very rare English Edwardian Ladies writing desk made from Rosewood around C1900. The desk features a rear shelf supported on 2 drawer podiums either side complete with a back panel, all of which is very ornately inlaid and strung. The desks top features the a lovely black full grain gold tooled writing desk leather which we have replaced so is in perfect condition and is framed by its stunning strung inlays. The base consists of a kneehole design incorporating 5 drawers with the centre being longer and locking via its original brass lever lock and key. Each drawer on this stunning piece displays a skillfully inlaid marquetry incorporating bluebells and foliage which is all framed with Boxwood & Ebony stringings complete with its original polished brass knobs throughout. The Desk also has some lovely extra details including inlaid brackets to the kneehole of a shell design going to 2 drop finials either side of the kneehole. The desk stands proudly on 4 typical Edwardian square tapering legs incorporating bluebell i...
